Portfolios can provide students with ways to collect, reflect upon and present examples of their own work. Several (free) online platforms allow students to develop their own online ePortfolios, which they can “carry” with them as they apply for jobs, graduate programs or move into careers. At the same time, portfolios bring together examples of student work, possibly from across courses or years, making them an effective place to assess student learning. This workshop will feature demonstrations of ePortfolio tools.
